

Leading Doctors Advised Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Nothing Helped Patient So Much—Kept System in Good Condition During Dangerous Illness.

It is seldom that physicians endorse a ready prepared medicine, for they have their own remedies and treatment to prescribe, and we don't blame the doctors in the least. Often, however, they have to admit that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do more for the patient than their own prescriptions. Only a year or so ago such a case happened in Kingston, N. Y., where one of the best known women in that historic city was attacked with pneumonia, at the age of 68 years. It was an alarming case. She was attended by three of the leading physicians in Kingston, and by a renowned specialist from New York City. She slowly recovered from the pneumonia, only to be attacked by severe nervousness, accompanied by distressing and complicated heart trouble. She could not sleep and her entire system became even more debilitated and weakened. It was absolutely necessary to keep her bowels in regular order and at the same time avoid any drugs of too drastic a nature. It was a delicate situation. Now the lady had previously used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and she and her family knew of its value. The doctors finally decided to allow her to use it and they found that the results were more satisfactory than from any other treatment they had tried. As they were broadminded and honest men, they advised her to continue its use, in connection with their own general treatment. Aided, therefore, by Favorite Remedy, the good lady steadily improved and she is now in most excellent health.

We will give the names of all parties upon request. We cite this case as further proof that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a highly valuable preparation, as safe as it is efficient, for the most delicate person. For nearly 40 years it has enjoyed a steady success in the treatment of Liver, Kidney and Blood disorders. Send today for a free sample bottle and valuable medical booklet. National Grange Meeting.
Arrangements are nearing completion by the local committees of New Hampshire, and particularly of the city of Manchester, for the opening of the national grange meeting in November. The city is preparing to open its almost every door to the coming of the grange hosts. Deputy Harry Spaulding is busy booking delegates and visitors for rooms, and he has assistants in the nearby cities who will look after accommodations there when Manchester is full. Rooms in private homes will be reserved at $1 per day. Never before in its history was the national grange compelled to confer the high degree on four different occasions in order to accommodate all who want to take it. But that will be the case this year.

The county of Jefferson, in New York state, has about 7,500 grange members in thirty-four active granges. Of these sixteen own their own halls, which are valued at about $27,750. Others will erect halls this year. This county and Franklin carry grange fire insurance to the amount of $12,000,000.

There is a grange in New York state to which nearly all the members of the local cornet band and orchestra belong. Well, there are worse things that might happen to that grange.

The natives of Shinewara, the island of Shikoku, Japan, have developed as a result of careful selection during a period of a hundred years a breed of fowls the roosters of which have tall feathers measuring eighteen feet long. The hens of the same breed have tails that sometimes reach a length of eight feet. In breeding the roosters they are kept in cages so narrow that they cannot turn around. At intervals of every few days they are taken out for exercise and carefully watched by an attendant, who from time to time washes and dries their plumage.

The average country highway would be a good deal easier to keep ship-shape than it is now if the width of the roadway were reduced from sixty-six feet, as it is in most sections, to forty feet in width. Not only would this twenty-two feet mean the restoration to cultivation of nearly three acres on a mile of road, but the narrowing of the roadway and the removal of the strip at either side, which is not only not worked as a part of the highway, but often is not mowed, would simplify the work of the highway supervisors and would also put an end to these unused strips as breeding places for noxious weeds.

FACT

Local Evidence.

Evidence that can be verified. Fact is what we want. Opinion is not enough. Opinions differ. Here's a Middlebury fact. You can test it.

James M. Tracy, S. Pleasant St., Merchants Row, Middlebury, Vt., says: "No one can realize how much Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I feel that they saved my life. I suffered from kidney complaint for nearly twenty years. The first symptom was rheumatic pains across my loins, and at times sharp twinges darted through my kidneys. My kidneys became disordered and the kidney secretions were irregular and painful in passage. Inflammation of the bladder also existed, and nearly drove me frantic. I had dizzy and fainting spells, and my whole system seemed to be affected. Getting no relief from the treatment of local doctors, I went to Burlington to see what they could do for me there, but was not helped. I returned home in despair. I could not leave the house, for fear, was so helpless I could hardly walk. Finally a comrade urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I went to Sheldon's Drug Store and got a supply. I admit, I had little confidence in their ability to reach such a bad case as mine. I immediately began taking them and I noticed an improvement in a week. I slept better at night and the pains in my back were much relieved. My kidneys became more normal. In about a month I was back to my work, and my health was restored, all due to Doan's Kidney Pills. I will recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as long as I live."

FILLING THE LUNGS.

Correct and Deep Breathing Is Essential to Good Health.

No piece of advice the physician can give will bear more frequent repetition than the pithy sentence, "Breathe deeply." It is a perfectly simple rule of health, yet it is constantly broken.

There are two ways to learn to breathe. If our powers of self discipline are poor, as is the case with most insufficient breathers, it is a good plan to join a gymnasium or calisthenic class and learn to use the lungs as a baby learns to use its feet and hands. But remember that lessons in breathing will do no good if the scholar thinks he is absolved from his task except when he is in the class.

A simpler method for those who have not time or opportunity to attend a gymnasium is to turn life's daily routine into a continuous discipline in breathing. If the poor breather takes the trouble to watch himself carefully he will find that when he is engaged upon any work that calls for close attention he does not even breathe as deeply as usual; he almost invariably holds his breath. Thus the blood current is vitiated when it ought to be cleansed, and the worker exhausts himself, not so much by his labors as by his neglect.

Draw in deep drafts of air every time you take a breath, and every little while stop everything else and fill your lungs a few times with breaths that test their capacity. You will be surprised to see the improvement that it will make in your general condition. —Timely Doctor.

PRUNING BY RAIN.

One of Nature's Many Methods of Thinning Her Forests.

Nature has many ways of thinning and pruning and trimming her forests—lightning strokes, heavy snows and storm winds to shatter and blow down whole trees here and there or break off branches as required. The results of these methods I have observed in different forests, but only once have I seen pruning by rain.

The rain froze on the trees as it fell and grew so thick and heavy that many of them lost a third or more of their branches. The view of the woods after the storm had passed and the sun shone forth was something never to be forgotten. Every twig and branch and rugged trunk was encased in pure crystal ice, and each oak and hickory and willow became a fairy crystal palace. Such dazzling brilliance, such effects of white light and irised light, glowing and flashing, I had never seen, nor have I since.

This sudden change of the leafless woods to glowing silver was, like the great aurora, spoken of for years and is one of the most beautiful of the many pictures that enrich my life. And besides the great shows there were thousands of others, even in the coldest weather, manifesting the utmost fineness and tenderness of beauty and affording noble compensation for hardship and pain.—Atlantic Monthly.

Red as a Cure.

In England, says the London Globe, apothecaries for many years were firm believers in the efficacy of the color red as a combatant of disease. Patients, especially those suffering from rheumatism, were frequently wrapped in red blankets and dressed in red clothes. "Let your nightcap be of scarlet," recommended Andrew Borden in his discourse on sleep, "and petyote of scarlet also," while a physician in the sixteenth century advised that the face be washed once a week and then wiped with a red cloth. Upon this latter item of the prescription great stress was laid—no doubt the color of the cloth was intended to act as an antidote against the chill of such frequent ablutions.

Grease a Cause of Disease.

Grease in a sink is a very prolific cause of disease. It cannot but accumulate from dishes and utensils, and when small bits of vegetable matter adhere to it a shelter is given to mischievous bacteria. Besides, grease will clog the drain and become a menace and an inconvenience. The surest and simplest cleansing agent is a strong solution of washing soda and boiling water. The sink should first be scrubbed with soap and the hot solution then dashed down the drain. This cleaning should be done at least once a week.—Chicago News.

Different Viewpoints.

Duncan Macpherson was playing golf. Going out he drove brilliantly over a stream in a hollow. "My, but you was a fine drive over the bonny wee burn!" he remarked to his caddy. Coming home he had to play over this same "burn" for another hole and drove right into it. "Gang ye an' fish th' ba' out o' your dirty sewer!" he growled.—Argonaut.

Use For His Head.

Old Gotrox (to his fashionable son)—You and your set thoroughly disgust me. You could get along as well without a head on your shoulders as with one. Alcy—Aw, fawther, how wediculous! Why, wheah would a fellah weah his hat?—Puck.

His Delicate Touch.

"That Muller is a peach at borrowing. At the dance last night he put my tie straight, and when he had finished I was 100 marks poorer."—Fillegende Blatter.
